Universities have held ceremonies for the awarding of degrees since the eleventh century. Over these many hundreds of years, considerable tradition has evolved around these commencement exercises and the procedure by which degrees are awarded.

Authorization for the awarding of a degree is complex. In the United States, each state has laws that permit the state to recognize and acknowledge the worthiness of an institution to award a degree. The Louisiana Legislature granted a charter to Loyola University on July 10, 1912, recognizing the university's right to grant degrees. Regional associations set standards and after careful examination will recognize an institution through accreditation. Loyola is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC) to award associate's, bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees.

The sequence of events that leads to the awarding of a degree consists first of a statement by the faculty of a college that an individual has completed all of the requirements and a recommendation to the dean that the individual be awarded a degree. The dean then certifies to the president of the institution that the student has completed the course requirements. The president, who has been authorized by the Board of Trustees, then confers the degree. A degree is a title that a college grants an individual upon completion of scholarly work. As proof of that title, a diploma is issued. The diploma repeats the sequence of faculty recommendations, certification by the dean, conference by the president, and the authority of the Board of Trustees as shown by the presence of the seal of the university.

In today's ceremonies, the name of each candidate for graduation present will be announced publicly. Each individual will come to the stage when their name is announced. The president of the university will congratulate the recipient. The diploma cover symbolizes the academic achievement that the individual has attained. Those who have completed undergraduate degree requirements move the tassel on the mortarboard from right to left, another symbolic custom. The president will wait until all of the names of degree recipients and candidates are announced and then will confer a degree collectively upon each individual in a real or prophetic way. At many universities today, diplomas are not issued until some weeks after commencement exercises.

ACADEMIC GOWNS AND HATS

Academic gowns and hats are a custom that dates back to the Middle Ages. Since early European and English universities were founded by the church, students and teachers were required to wear distinctive gowns at all times. Although the custom was brought to this country in colonial days, the requirement for students was soon dropped. The custom for professors was confined to special occasions such as graduation exercises and inaugurations of college and university presidents.

With the increase in the number of educational institutions and the development of new fields of study, confusion arose about the type of gown and the color to denote various degrees. To introduce uniformity and set up a clearinghouse for new disciplines, a commission representing leading American colleges produced The Intercollegiate Code in 1895. In 1932, a national committee of the American Council on Education revised this code into The Academic Costume Code. It was revised again in 1959. Although not obligatory, most of the educational institutions in the country follow it in awarding their degrees, earned and honorary.

The most significant part of the academic dress is the hood. While there are bachelor's degree hoods, many institutions reserve the wearing of hoods for graduate degrees. Each successively higher degree carries with it a longer hood. The doctoral hood also has side panels on the back. The color of its velvet border indicates the academic field, and it is lined with the color or colors of the institution granting the degree.

Although most doctoral gowns are black, with black velvet bars and panels, in some cases the color of the gown is that of the university conferring the degree—blue for Yale, crimson for Harvard, slate for Columbia. All such gowns have black bars and panels.

Academic fields also may be indicated by the color of velvet on the doctoral gowns: three two-inch bars on the sleeves and a five-inch border extending from the back of the neck down the two sides in front.

Caps are black. Gowns for bachelor's and master's degrees are plain black, but sleeves of the latter are short with trailing "elbows." Doctoral gowns of European universities are usually very colorful. The caps often are not of the conventional mortarboard shape.

DISTINCTION CORDS

Undergraduate students graduating with honors wear distinction cords symbolizing the following honors:

GOLD CORDS — Summa Cum Laude (3.9 GPA)

SILVER CORDS — Magna Cum Laude (3.7 GPA)

BRONZE CORDS — Cum Laude (3.5 GPA)

Graduate students graduating with distinction wear cords symbolizing the following:

MAROON AND GOLD CORDS — With High Distinction (4.0 GPA)

MAROON CORDS — With Distinction (3.900–3.999 GPA)

CEREMONIAL MACE

Loyola University's Ceremonial Mace is an ornamental mace traditionally carried at the head of academic processions as a symbol of educational authority and institutional identity. Its design and appearance typically resemble a metal torch or cross decorated by carvings including the university seal.

The Loyola mace was designed in 1995 by then Department of Visual Arts faculty member Erik Johnson. It is carried as a symbol of authority in processions at commencement and other academic ceremonies. During other times of the year, it is on permanent display in Marquette Hall. It was utilized for the first time October 28, 1995, at the inauguration of the Rev. Bernard P. Knoth, S.J., as 15th president of the university.

The iconography on the mace is derived from the seal of the university as designed in 1929 and stylized in 1970. The arms of the Loyola family consist of two gray wolves suspending a kettle between them. This is seen as a symbol of generosity because it signifies such abundance that after everyone was fed there was always something left in the pot upon which the wolves could feast.

The fleur-de-lis represents the French origins of the state and city.

The pelican feeding her young with her own blood affiliates Loyola with the state of Louisiana.

The wolves, fleur-de-lis, pelican, and bottom termination are of cast bronze. The kettle, with the facade of Marquette Hall in low relief, is cast iron. Overall length is approximately thirty-three inches.

The staff is inscribed with the following significant dates in Loyola University New Orleans history:

- 2012 — the 100th anniversary of Loyola's charter;
- MCMXII — 1912 — chartering of Loyola University;
- MDCCCXLIX — 1849 — founding of the College of the Immaculate Conception;
- MDCCCXXXVII — 1837 — founding of St. Charles College; and
- MDCCXXVI — 1726 — arrival of the Society of Jesus in Louisiana.

HONORARY DEGREES

Honorary degrees are awarded to individuals because of contributions the individual has made to their community and beyond.

These degrees carry the distinction honoris causa, which means “cause of honor.”

The sequence of events is slightly different and is somewhat more ceremonial than for traditional degrees.

A committee of faculty, staff, and student representatives considers individuals for this honor, examining both the careers and the contributions of the nominees. This group presents its recommendations to the president, who forwards them to the Board of Trustees. The board selects the recipients and authorizes the preparation of a diploma for each honoree. The diploma bears the signatures of the chair and secretary of the Board of Trustees, the president, and the provost.

The diploma notes the actions of the individual that the committee and the board considered. The president confers the degree. The honoree wears an honorary degree hood, bordered in velvet and lined in the maroon and gold colors of the university.

MAJOR GENERAL ANGELA SALINAS, USMC (RET.)

Major General Angela Salinas (Ret.) served in the United States Marine Corps for 39 years, becoming the first Hispanic woman promoted to brigadier general in the Corps' history. She commanded at every level, including as Commanding General of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot San Diego and the Western Recruiting Region. When she retired in 2013, she was the highest-ranking woman in the Marine Corps and the longest-serving woman in its history.

Salinas broke barriers throughout her career, including becoming the first woman to command a recruiting district, the first woman assigned to a major combatant command's policy division, and the first female combat service support ground monitor. Her numerous honors include the Navy Distinguished Service Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal, and Legion of Merit. Since 2015, she has served as CEO of the Girl Scouts of Southwest Texas, where she continues to lead and inspire future generations.

Salinas earned her Bachelor of Arts in History from Dominican University of California and a Master of Arts in National Security and Strategic Studies from the Naval War College. She is a graduate of the Army War College, the Naval War College's College of Command and Staff, and the Amphibious Warfare School.

TOM GRUBER '81

Tom Gruber is a product developer, inventor, and entrepreneur best known as the co-founder, CTO, and head of design for the team that created Siri, Apple's voice assistant. Acquired by Apple in 2010, Siri has become one of the most widely used AI technologies in the world. At Apple, Gruber led the Advanced Development Group, designing new AI-based product capabilities for more than eight years.

Gruber has co-founded companies that help travelers learn from the collective experience of others and enable large communities of professionals to contribute to and learn from a collective body of knowledge. He is currently the CTO and co-founder of LifeScore, which develops adaptive music that responds to listener needs and context.

An advocate for Humanistic AI, Gruber promotes the use of artificial intelligence to enhance rather than replace human capabilities. His TED talk on Humanistic AI has been viewed millions of times worldwide.

Gruber earned a double major B.S. in psychology and computer science at Loyola University New Orleans and both a Master of Science and a Ph.D. in Computer and Information Science from the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

2025 IGNATIAN AWARDS

Loyola's highest award for students, Ignatian Award winners have distinguished themselves by their holistic involvement in the life of the university — representing Loyola with honor and distinction, maintaining a distinguished grade point average, living a strong faith commitment, demonstrating examples of service for and with others, and showing high regard for Ignatian, Jesuit values.

Ignatian Award recipients are chosen by a committee of faculty, students, and staff from nominations submitted by the Loyola community.

The 2025 Ignatian Award recipients are:

The preceding program lists candidates eligible to participate in the spring 2025 commencement. Participation in this commencement exercise is not restricted to those who have completed all requirements for graduation. All candidates for the degree in spring participate without consideration of their final semester grades. Therefore, the program may not be a true list of degree recipients and their date of graduation. Likewise, the honor distinctions are based on current grade point averages.

The academic distinctions listed in this program are based on work completed through fall, 2024. Distinctions may change based on spring and/or summer grades.

Graduation distinctions for transfer students who complete 60 or more Loyola quality hours will be based solely on the Loyola cumulative grade point average.

Transfer students who complete fewer than 60 Loyola cumulative quality hours are not eligible for graduate distinctions.

Spring 2025 graduation candidates will be awarded their degree upon approval of their dean on June 1. Candidates for summer and fall 2025 will be awarded their degree upon approval at a later date.
